Suggestions for determining which classes are priority:

1. You should consider the class size (seminars, unless noted otherwise in the course description, are limited to 20 students); other classes are usually capped according to room size. Classrooms 1,2,3 and 4 are capped between 72-89; classrooms 5 and 6 are capped at 39; classrooms 7 and 8 are capped at 58.
2. Consider the number of other courses offered in the same time slot.
3. Who is the instructor?
4. How frequently is the course offered – every year? Twice a year? Every other year?
5. Any other factor that you may consider relevant such as how badly you need the class to fulfill certificate or graduation requirements.
6. Do you need a prerequisite for a priority class? You should be sure to consider the prerequisite as a priority if you don't have it as you will need to register for it before registering for the priority class.

Potential Problems with On-Line Registration

Problems that may arise when registering on-line which will cause your registration not to be processed or processed erroneously include:

1. Time Conflicts - registering two classes that overlap in time.
2. Too many credits for your division load (day vs evening). Day Division load is capped at 17 credits; evening is capped at 12. If you want to change divisions, you must petition before registering. On Line Division petition is found at <http://law.lclark.edu/dept/lawreg/divisionchange.html>.
3. Trying to add a class that needs professor consent or an application. (These classes must be registered through the Registrar's office with professor consent confirmed).
4. Trying to add a class without the necessary pre-requisites
5. Trying to add a class in the wrong semester or adding the wrong class section. You are responsible for the course information that appears on your schedule on WebAdvisor.
6. Missing your invitation to add a class for which you are wait listed.
7. Cashier Office holds for past tuition and overdue fines.
8. You may not withdraw for the semester by using on-line registration. You must submit written notification to the Registrar's office to do this.
